Report on

Field study to Alipore Zoological Park, Kolkata, based on Paper Animal Behaviour & Chronobiology, Code DSE I.

Objective of the study: To observe and study the natural habitats as part of the extension and outreach program

Brief description of the programme

A field study was conducted at Alipore Zoological Park, Kolkata by the students of B. Sc 5th Semester Department of Zoology, Gargaon College, as part of their syllabus from 28th October, to 4th November 2022. A total of 49 students along with the teacher in charge Dr. Rina Handique and Pimily Langthasa went to the trip. The trip was carried out to explore the flora and fauna of the national park existing amidst the natural ecosystem and the existing interrelationship among them. The field visit enriched the students with adequate knowledge of the natural ecosystems and the diversity existing therein.

Rationality of the report:

Alipore Zoo houses a diverse collection of animal species, providing students with the chance to observe and study various taxonomic groups. This field studies aids in understanding biodiversity, ecological interactions, and the importance of conservation. The students benefit from observing animal behavior in a confined atmosphere. These field study offers insights into natural behaviors, social structures, and adaptations, which are crucial for students studying animal behavior and ethology. Visiting Zoos actively participates in ex-situ conservation efforts, housing endangered species and contributing to breeding programs. The zoo also provides a controlled environment for studying animal health and diseases. Zoology students can participate in research projects focused on disease prevention, treatment, and the impacts of captivity on animal health. Zoology students benefit from hands-on experiences with live animals, supplementing their theoretical knowledge with practical insights.
